New start for apprentices

KINGS Engineering recently hosted a family day to welcome seven new apprentices and their families to the Rutherford company.

The Kings Family Day is a long-running way to celebrate new apprentices and provides a forum for their families to better understand the new role and to meet their colleagues and supervisors.

The day featured inductions, talks from senior leaders, site tours and an overview of support programs available to apprentices.

Kings general manager Greg Hurney said the start of an apprenticeship was a major milestone for young men and women.

"It's one of the highlights of the year for the entire team at Kings and we all take great pleasure in helping them develop their skills as a tradesperson, and seeing them grow as young adults in our community," he said.

"The new apprentices include two young locals - Sean Ayscough and Noah Ambrum - who entered the Kings Apprentice and Work Experience Initiative through the Youth Express KauKan program."
